

Report by Policy Pensions Institute [PPI]

In their report published in March the PPI concluded that public service pension schemes provided good value in comparison to those in the private sector. The report went on to say that public service pensions were worth on average between 5% and 20% of salary and even after the proposed reforms from 2006 would still be worth up to 18% of salary.

The full report can be viewed at <http://www.pensionspolicyinstitute.org.uk/news.asp?p=114&s=2&a=0>.